Story of Rimsha

When she was in grade 3, Rimsha’s mother died and soon her father abandoned the family. Having nobody at home to feed herself and her younger siblings, Rimsha took it upon her to run the household and thereby started sewing clothes. Now 15 years of age, Rimsha has spent the past few months in Idara-O-Taleem-o-Agahi school. Now skilled as well as educated, she feels much more secure and confident about her future also setting an example for other girls in her area to follow.

Story of Fatima

After her mother suddenly fell ill, Fatima had to drop from school and support her family. Working as a housemaid, Fatima sufficiently kept the proceedings stable in her house but at the expense of sacrificing her dream. Despite the financial and cultural constraints that crept along, Fatima managed to rejoin school. Because of Advancing Action for Adolescent Girls program, in Fatima’s own words, allowed her to ‘rediscover’ herself, helping regain her lost confidence. Now, Fatima, having overcome the trauma of her past, aims at changing her future and of those around her by creating awareness among young girls about the importance of education.
Story of Fatima Amjad

“I wish I could go to school like other girls,” the dream that seemed too far-fetched for Fatima, left her greatly disheartened. In a family, where women were confined to the proximity of their homes, Fatima rose up and joined Advancing Action for Adolescent Girls education program, ‘Siyani Sahili’ which turned her dreams into reality. Now living up to her passion, Fatima is content with her education and aims to improve the lives of others on similar footsteps.
Story of Sawera Rafiq

“ I do not want anyone to die of poverty.” says 14-year-old Sawera aspiring to become a doctor and help the poor in her community inflicted with life-threatening diseases. Sawere knows well about the difficult situation in her neighbourhood and hopes to do something meaningful for the members. Through the ‘Siyani Saheli’ program, Advancing Action for Adolescent Girls is helping Sawera and many like her to achieve their dreams and serve the nation.
