This year's GMR is the twelfth and final in the GMR series. The Report will provide a definitive assessment of what has (and has not) been achieved at both global and country levels.

This year's report will be analyzing each EFA goal and highlighting policies and practices that have helped or hindered national progress. It will take a particular look at trends in domestic financing and international aid flows for education.

Drawing upon lessons presented in previous reports, the 2015 GMR critically assesses the current formulations of the proposed post-2015 education targets and provide recommendations to help global leaders define new education priorities to be agreed upon at Incheon, Korea at the World Education Forum on 19-22 May 2015.
